HIGH INCIDENCE SPECIAL EDUCATION

Graduate preparation focuses on:

• Meeting the educational needs of students with learning and/or behavior disabilities.

• Strategies to promote access to the general curriculum as well as knowledge about how to address the unique learning and support needs of individual students.

• Intensive academic and behavioral support strategies.

• Strategies to work as co-teachers, consultants, and resource teachers who help classroom teachers adapt content and conditions for diverse and struggling learners.

To obtain a Special Education High Incidence Endorsement, one must hold a current general education license (early childhood, elementary, or secondary).

Students can obtain a Master’s degree or may study for endorsement only (non-degree).
